Even as a mockup, the site was impressive. I like the layout of the content and the color scheme of the site.

There was a lot of good research already in place, and the use of white space was effective in distinguishing the different sections in the site.

These are some areas of improvement to consider when moving forward:

- I think I am going to change my mind about a white background to off white because it looks too "harsh" with a plain white background
- The navigation bar is well defined and clear, but it could be improved by adding some links that will scroll the page down to the selected area
- The borders are nice, but I think that they should be a different image because the current ones look like water. Although there are underwater animatronics, I think the border should be of gears or wires so it can be about all kinds of animatronics

The logo for the site was cool and I appreciate all of the effort so far.
